Serving Clients Across the Manufacturing and Distribution Industry

Business enterprises in the manufacturing and distribution industry operate in an extremely challenging environment. Expanding laws and regulations in the U.S. and in countries across the globe require legal counsel with an advanced understanding of industry operations.

The attorneys at Kaufman Dolowich advise companies operating throughout the manufacturing and distribution industry. Our firm offers a diverse team of attorneys who focus on helping clients develop innovative and cost-effective solutions that meet the demands of today's global economy. We utilize a cross-disciplinary approach to the practice of law which provides our clients the benefit of direct access to attorneys working in wide range of legal disciplines, from labor and employment law to commercial litigation to general liability.

Our legal team is well known throughout the industry for the ability to accurately assess complex issues and recommend practical strategies that meet the needs and objectives of our clients. Whether we are counseling a national distribution company on how to respond to a micro-unit labor organizing drive, or litigating a commercial dispute on behalf of a local manufacturer, we aim to help clients achieve optimal results in the most expeditious and cost-conscious manner possible.
