

Kaufman Dolowich & Voluck is Now Kaufman Dolowich

Effective immediately, we are pleased to announce that our firm is now Kaufman Dolowich LLP. The new name, prompted by the retirement of Partner Philip Voluck, is part of a larger rebranding effort that better reflects the value and breadth of services we deliver, as well as the growth of our practice and platform.

“We look forward to this exciting new chapter,” says Firmwide Co-Managing Partner Michael Kaufman. “It represents an important milestone as we continue to grow and expand our footprint, along with our breadth and depth of services.” Along with the name change, we also have a new logo and new web domain, KaufmanDolowich.com. Our law firm website and our social media platforms have also been updated to reflect our new moniker, and firm email addresses now use the domain @kaufmandolowich.com.

While we are proud of the expansion and evolution of our firm, we remain rooted in our longstanding commitment to service excellence and loyalty to our clients.

Founded in 1986, the firm has grown throughout the past 37 years from a four-person labor and employment law boutique into a nationwide full-service law firm with practices including labor and employment, commercial litigation, directors’ and officers’ liability, professional liability, insurance coverage & litigation, construction, financial services, cybersecurity, maritime, shared economy and hospitality. Like our clients, we have grown in emerging marketplaces across the country and today have offices coast to coast representing clients throughout the United States, and in Bermuda and the United Kingdom.
