Calif. Whistleblower Law Shines Light On Complaint Process

Law360, San Diego (December 09, 2013, 10:49 PM ET) — A new California law barring companies from retaliating against workers who internally report alleged legal violations is expected to trigger a rise in whistleblower retaliation claims against employers, but lawyers say companies can protect themselves from liability by following through on any complaints and keeping a key adage in mind: Don't shoot the messenger.
